

Cormetech Inc. - Conflict Minerals Declaration

Cormetech, Inc. (“Cormetech”) is committed to maintaining a supply chain that includes the sourcing of materials from companies that share our values related to human rights.

Conflict Minerals Rule

The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”) on August 22, 2012, approved the final rule implementing Section 1502 of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act, which lays out reporting obligations for companies that are publicly traded in the U.S. and thus governed by the SEC. Under this rule, companies that make products for which 3TG metals (tantalum, tin, tungsten, and gold) are necessary to the functionality or production of that product are required to assess their supply chains and publically report on the source of these materials if they are sourced from regions of conflict in and around the Democratic Republic of Congo. Although Cormetech is not a publically traded company, and therefore not directly subject to this law, we are providing this policy to our downstream customers to help them comply with any obligations relative to this law.

Cormetech’s Corporate Position on Conflict Minerals

Cormetech has initiated a comprehensive process to increase our supply chain due diligence and to document the origins of any metals or derivatives of metals defined as conflict minerals under the SEC regulation. Based on the information and certifications provided to date, Cormetech is not aware of any conflict minerals originating from the DRC or adjoining countries in our products. Cormetech will not source conflict minerals from any supplier that is not able to provide us satisfactory confirmation that they themselves have conducted a “reasonable country of origin” inquiry to determine that their 3TG metals are not originally sourced from the Democratic Republic of Congo or adjoining countries.
